A delight for flower lovers, art lovers and specialists, this beautifully illustrated survey of botanical illustration, primarily of flowers, includes twice as many color plates as the long out-of-print 1950 edition. Beginning with a look at the depiction of plants in antiquity, medieval herbals and flower studies by Leonardo da Vinci and Albrecht Durer, the text demonstrates how both scientific botany and floriculture caused the art and craft of botanical illustration to blossom in England, France, Germany and Holland. A prime example is English artist Robert Thornton’s engravings for his magnificent folio volume The Temple of Flora (1799-1807), which brought him immortality and financial ruin. This revised edition includes greatly expanded coverage of 20th-century works from South Africa, Australia and Britain. Stearn is a botanist formerly with the British Museum; the late Blunt was a curator and artist. Copyright 1994 Cahners Business Information, Inc.

Marvelous book -- thank you SO much.....Marion Silliman

This book is THE Bible for Botanic Illustration. The revised and updated volume by the great

Professor William T. Stearn, formerly botanist at the British Museum, and his famous collaborator, curator and artist Wilfred Blunt is lavishly illustrated with many plates in color--as they must truly be for a book on this subject.Your study of botanic illustration starts here with what is the defacto bibliography on this subject. If it turns out to be the most expensive book in your collection of books on this subject, that is fully justified.Addendum: My analysis of the color plate totals for the various editions is as follows:1st Edition, 1950 Collins 472nd Edition, 1952 Collins --3rd Edition, 1955 Collins 474th Edition, 1967 -- --Japanese, 1986 -- --Ant.Coll.Club, ’94 ACC 126Paperback, 1994 Dover 16Ant.Coll.Club, ’00 ACC 126
