Praise for They Did What? 50 Impressive Kids and Their Amazing (and True!) Stories"Why should grown-ups get all the historical, scientific, athletic, cinematic, and artistic glory?Ã Â Choosing exemplars from both past and present, Mitchell includes but goes well beyond Alexander the Great, Anne Frank, and like usual suspects to introduce a host of lesser-known luminaries . . . for readers whose fires need lighting, thereÃ¢â ¬â„¢s motivational kindling on nearly every page.Ã Â A breezy, bustling bucketful of courageous acts and eye-popping feats."--Kirkus Reviews"This impressively broad and engaging collection of brief biographies ranges thousands of years of human history, around the world, and across a variety of disciplines that include intellectual and athletic achievements . . .Ã Â Accompanied by PetrusÃ¢â ¬â„¢ appealing sketched portraits, the profiles of the individuals featured contain enough background informationÃ¢â ¬â •family, social class, disability, or extraordinary talent, for instanceÃ¢â ¬â •to make the achievements sensible as well as relevant to contemporary readers."--Booklist Ã Â

Saundra Mitchell is absolutely, completely, totally crazy about history. If you come to her hometown of Indianapolis, she'll show you the streets named after 19th century trolley stops, where Civil War prisoners were kept, and where the first European cemetery in town used to be. (That's right, they moved it! How creepy is that?) When she's not geeking out about history, she's writing novels for young adults, flipping out about pop culture with her best friend, and seriously embarrassing her kids. Find out more about her at www.saundramitchell.com and follow her on Twitter @SaundraMitchell.

This is a wonderful book, as is the other one in the series about 50 Amazing women. My 10-year-old really enjoys reading through these books and reading about figures she already knows, as well as learning about new ones. We have made these part of our homeschool curriculum.
