"What European country ruled the 13 original American colonies?" "Is Oregon's chief industry based on timber or coal?" "Did George Washington Carver discover important new uses for apples, peanuts or potatoes?" Brain Quest, the remarkable series of educational quiz cards, says, "It's o.k. to be smart!" In this two-deck, 850-question game, kids age 9 and older are challenged on their knowledge of America. Each card (they're attached so they fan out on a hinge) is divided into six categories: Famous Americans, From Sea to Sea, Law of the Land, Words & Music, Turning Points, and Here & There. Participants can play any number of ways--with a partner, in teams, by themselves, keeping score or not, choosing a favorite category, or playing the whole card. The questions are challenging--yet shouldn't be over the heads of most young participants. Here is the perfect antidote to a long car trip or a boring Sunday afternoon. And for younger or older siblings, math whizzes, geography geniuses, history buffs, or pretty much anyone with a thinking cap on, there's a Brain Quest out there for you, too. (Ages 9 and older) --Emilie Coulter --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

With 850 questions and answers about people, places, popular literature and more, Brain Quest America makes history fun. The two-deck set is packaged in a resealable plastic storage case and a bottom fastener keeps cards together, making this ideal for summer road trips. We bought it as a Fourth of July Family themed quiz for our kids... Who doesn't dig Brain Quest?!

Got us through our road trip - still just as entertaining at 29 as it was when I was 9!

Similar to the other fan-decks from Brain Quest--another great time-passer for car rides and waiting rooms. We have used grade-specific ones in the past and enjoy this American themed one just as much. Nice assortment of topics and difficulty worked well for my 9 & 11 yr olds, plus a few to keep me on my toes.

Using these to teach English and citizenship to adult immigrants. It works well and the students like it

I enjoy the brainquest cards. I homeschool my child and we make a game of them. It helps with reading, memory and we have quizzes. Thank you.

Brain Quest sets are great for kids!

Very good
