Synopsis

This collection of short stories of the women who entertained the West in makeshift theaters and palaces built to showcase the divas who were beloved by emigrants to the Ã¢â ¬Å“uncivilizedÃ¢â ¬Â• West will feature well-known and lesser known dancers, singers, and actresses and their exploits. Author Chris Enss will bring her comedic timing and long experience writing about the time and culture of the West to this collection.

Customer Reviews

Very good but where is Lillie Langtry? The Judge would be disappointed.

Nice easy fun read!! Would tell friends to buy it.

interesting reading

Strolling thru the Tucson Festival of Books this year, I happened to spy a conspicously well-dressed woman seated behind a book with an intriguing title: "Wicked Women". Seemed like the perfect birthday gift for a long-time friend and fellow lover of historical biography. After speaking with the author, I picked up "Entertaining Women". I am delighted to say that "Entertaining Women" has introduced me to an area of Western history I was unfamiliar with. The author thoroughly researches and painstakingly documents her findings. And she weaves her facts into a believable and likeable cast of characters. I am now anxious to read more of her books. In fact, I may just have to borrow that gift book back!
