Susan Goldman Rubin is the author of several successful art books on artists such as Vincent van Gogh, Edgar Degas, and Andy Warhol. Her dynamic nonfiction has won her many awards and accolades from the CCBC, ALA, and the Smithsonian, among others. She lives in Southern California where she writes and teaches writing.

Susan Goldman Rubin has a great series going. I have read this book to my children for 10 years. First of all, I LOVE MATISSE! Second, I love this book because I can teach my children to love Matisse! All three of my children paid attention to this book and the images from a young age. I recommend it for baby showers or toddler birthdays. Because of the colors and shapes, it is a great book for your infant library. My pediatrician told me to read at every nap and bed time from the day the babies come home from the hospital to help with brain development, bonding and to encourage a love of reading. We started from day one with books like these and my children are all avid readers. This is a great book for infants and toddlers. Heck, I still love looking at it.

I bought one of these for my niece and then got another for myself. Beautiful and entertaining for little ones and beautiful and stress relieving for me. Makes reading together extra nice.

My three-month old likes to stare at the images, and for me, it's more interesting to look at than most baby books. The whole series of these board books from Chronicle are really well made; the images are reproduced beautifully. The words that have been written to go along with the images are a little hokey. I think it would be nice if there was more rhythm and rhyme to keep an older baby's attention, and that's why I only gave it four stars. But at three months, my baby likes it just fine.

Love this! My 2 year old has had it since birth and knows all the words now. Fun to read! It's not super rhyme-y which I prefer.

I buy this book for every single one of my friend's kids. It's a great way to introduce them to art, and since it's hardcover its easy for the babies to hold too

Awesome book. My eight month daughter loves it. The colors are bright with high contrast, perfect for babies, plus she gets to learn about art.

I have 12 artist board books for my students to read while lunch is being prepared. You can't lose if you use these for a child's first introduction to artists

Beautiful book. My 2 year old granddaughter loves It. She moves her body along with the illustrations while reading it.
