Lydia Mihelic Pulsipher is a cultural-historical geographer who studies the landscapes of ordinary people through the lens of geography. She has contributed to several geography-related exhibits at the Smithsonian Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C., including "Seeds of Change," which featured her research in the eastern Caribbean on human adaptation to the Neo-troics in the post-Columbian period, including the present. She and her graduate students have also looked at cultural geography and national/ethnic identity issues in the new Central European members of the European Union, and at the impact of tourism development on traditional landscapes in these countries. In January, 2009, Dr. Pulsipher was awarded the Preston E. James Eminent Latin Americanist Career Award, by the Conference of Latin Americanist Geographers, for work on the cultural and environmental geography of the Eastern Caribbean and Latin America, and public outreach through collaborations with the Smithsonian Institution and the Seeds of Change exhibit. Alex A. Pulsipheris an independent scholar inKnoxville, TN, focusing onurban development, sustainability, and global environmental change. In the early 1990s, Alex spent some time in South Asia working for a development research center and then went on to do an undergraduate thesis on the history of Hindu nationalism at Wesleyan University. Beginning in 1995, Alex worked full time on the research and writing of the first edition ofWorld Regional Geography. In 1999 and 2000, he traveled to South America, Southeast Asia, andSouth Asia, where he collected information for the second edition ofWorld Regional Geographyand for the website. In 2000 and 2001, he returned to writing material and designing maps for the second edition. In 2010, he earned a masters degree in Geography fromClarkUniversity, where he studied the diffusion of green technologies in the context of environmental change."

This book does well presenting information, however the wording throughout the book, especially regarding US foreign policy, was very biased. While the information is not incorrect, it certainly clearly displays the writers' political opinions on geopolitics and the like. I am a student taking a geography class, not a government class, and while I understand that 'world' geography and politics tend to go hand in hand, I really don't appreciate reading through passages clearly biased, whether I agree with that bias or not.

It is what I needed, a good price, and was in great condition!

Good textbook.

The book is presentable and arrived within the stipulated date

Perfect for my GEA class
