Especially for people looking for a camping destination accessible by car, this guide to Ontario's parks is a great reference to compare different parks. (Diana Mumford Wave Length Magazine)There are hundreds of national and provincial parks and conservation areas in Ontario, and choosing between them for a camping trip is no easy task... [This book is] useful, especially for novice campers, as a knowledgeable overview of options. (Andrew Ryan Globe and Mail 2005-07-09)Donna Carpenter... really knows her parks. (Deborah Quaile Diversions)

Donna Carpenter has been writing guidebooks for the past ten years. She is the author of the popular Daytripper series and has explored the cities and villages, highways and back roads of Ontario in all seasons.

This book is a must if you are planning a trip to any of Ontario's Provincial Parks! It is well organized into regions with a map of each region. It gives honest opinions about the what the park has or doesn't have to offer. There are ratings on Natural Environment, Activities, and Camping conditions that will give you a quick overview of any park. If you like private, quiet campsites, she recommends specific site numbers at each park along with a good description of the campground as a whole. For each park she describes what it's renowned for, natural environment, wildlife, activities, campgrounds, history, etc., and gives a concise summary. The only thing I would add is a map of the campgrounds or the individual parks. This is a must have!
