Virginia Satir writes in an easy to relate to style about positive ways to support and encourage growth, development and understanding of the people in your family. Through simple games she helps you get in touch with what the existing relationships are among your family members and how they work, or why they may not be working as well as they might. She reaffirms that we own all of the parts of ourselves that make us who we are, and makes it easy and OK to take a look at them. Perhaps there are some behaviors that are puzzling, or get negative results that you see in yourself or other family members. After reading this book, you will see loving and comfortable ways to bring those behaviors into the light of day without criticism or embarrassment. Then, following simple but meaningful guidelines, you and your family will gain understanding and insight into behaviors and relationships that your family uses as its operating system. You will be able to work on changes that you decide to make, and continue to feel trust and support of your family. Perhaps they want to change some things too.

Mrs. Satir’s book The New Peoplemaking was one of the books required for my communication class. I just love Mrs. Satir character, the way she composed her book. For example, she write about self-worth, using "The Pot Nobody Watches" as a memorabilia. (p.20). I just love this book, because I can relate to many of the lines in her writing. Virginia Satir background as a therapy justify her writing on the family. The illustration in the book are great. Often I refer back to chapters in this book for [quotes]. If you interact with children are families, I think Satir’s book is invaluable.

She is awesome, one of original family therapists, love her understanding of group systems and how we operate as a system. Highly recommend.

I raised my children using the concepts in the first edition of Peoplemaking. If you know the poem Children Learn What They Live and agree with its concepts you will love Satir’s book. I read it in college and have carried her words with me for 35 years.
