To get off the beaten path, check out The Unknown City and Secrets of the City guides. . . which offer insider anecdotes and esoteric tidbits. —Homemakers (Homemeakers)...these guides will come in handy if you want an alternative to the usual walking tour of the city." —InsideOut Travel (InsideOut Travel)

James Martin is a columnist for Calgary’s FFWD Weekly and a freelance writer on the side. Until last year he was a true-blue Calgarian. He’s since moved to Montreal where he is learning how to eat bagels.

I was flying into Calgary for a couple days and this book really came in handy for someone seeking out the unique parts of the city. I have Toronto: The Unknown City and really enjoy all the adventures. The Calgary version is a little outdated though, some of the clubs mentioned have since shut down and at times was more of a history textbook than guide to discovery, but there was enough to keep me fulfilled. And for $2, who wouldn't love to check out a taxidermied rodent museum!
