Melissa Stewart is the owner of Honeybee Productions, an editorial services company, and has written many celebrated nonfiction books for children. For National Geographic Readers Melissa has written Ants, Snakes, and Dolphins.

My son is 7 and interested in the Titanic. I wanted something that had lots of facts and pictures, but was still accessible and appropriate for his age group and reading level (too many books for kids on this topic are too dense, or are for older readers). The book is good for both solo reading and reading together. It's not too long or too big, so it's not intimidating. I like the imagery and the design. It is just enough for a young boy's attention span. The author is a good children's non-fiction writer, so when I saw her name as author, I felt confident ordering this book.

This book is great, well laid out and a good reference for my daughter's Titanic research paper

My 10 year autistic son is obsessed with Titanic. He loves it and has already wore out pages. It's been fun and informational to read with him. As a daughter of a school teacher, she ordered one as well for her classroom after seeing how well the story of passengers was told but didn't scare kids when talking about passengers deaths.

This was a gift for my youngest grandson who is in 2nd grade. They have been studying the Titanic and he became very interested in this subject. He loves this DVD and a National Geographic for kids that I sent him.

I guess next time I should read the full discription before I order stuff. I didn't realize that this was a kids book. I just saw national geographic and that it was a book about the Titanic so I thought it was going to be more discriptive until I got it in the mail. It's a great book for kids but it's not what I was looking for.

My son is 5 and wanted to know more about Titanic so we ordered this book. It delivered a good mix of storytelling to keep him interested and facts. If your child wants to know more about the ship, this is a solid choice.

My grandson enjoyed this a lot. Interesting information. Only problem was really slow shipping.

I purchased this for my 5-year old grandson and he just loves it....he has it with him all the time.
