Paola Romanelli is the author of several craft books covering subjects that include basketry, jewelry making and candles. She lives in Milan, Italy.

A good book with basic information about handmilling soaps and making pretty melt and pour projects for people who love soap making but can’t or shouldn’t deal with scary chemicals like lye. She explains a lot of projects in this book that I have been baffled about for a while even with my other soap books. This is a nice addition to anyone’s soap library. The projects are user friendly.

This is one of the wosrt books I have seen for soap making! It did not explain what she was doing, and it didn’t give any info on where to get many of the required materials (such as molds). I’ve been a soaper for many years and I didn’t always understand what she was trying to say. If there was a lower rating than 1 star I would give it to this book.
