H. NORMAN WRIGHT is a licensed marriage, family and child therapist who was in private practice for more than 40 years. He is currently the Research Professor of Christian Education at Talbot School of Theology, where he has taught graduate students in counseling and psychology for four decades. Dr. Wright is the author of more than 70 books, Gold Medallion Award. Ã Â

I have read a plethora of counseling books (both secular and Nouthetic) on my way to my Doctorate in counseling. If someone were to ask me "what one book gave me the most practical insight and was most inspiring?" I would say Dr. Wright’s Crisis and Trauma. In this wonderful volume he gives the reader a down-to-earth guide that exudes feeling and sensitivity on how to deal with the main reason anyone comes into our offices: Distress--a trauma that has interrupted their normal way of thinking and doing. Albeit, not everyone who shows up in the waiting room is a survivor of a terrible crisis but in most cases they need the sensitivity and practical approach that Dr. Wright offers. I would use this book as a manual or as the "Bible on Crises counseling" if you will.

I was so impressed with Dr. Wright's Trauma and Crisis Counseling. I am a counselor and I also recently lost one of my sons. I have purchased a number of books on the topic of Christian counseling. Norman Wright's book is the best. The pointed descriptions of crisis, trauma and loss contained in the book could have only been penned by a writer who has been there. Dr. wright clearly has! His uncensored, honest description of crisis, trauma and grief unencunbered by mispoken biblical rhetoric that pushes you to "get over it and be happy," helped to make me a better Christian counselor. At the same time, Wright is biblical knowledgeable and generously shares compassionate scripture that may speak to your authentic, deep sorrow and even spiritual doubts. I found this honesty to be a source of comfort and an unexpected path back to my faith which I felt like I was losing.

An excellent spiritual book filled with crisis counseling stories, tips, and techniques depicting how to help others (and yourself) in recovering from loss and/or abuse of any kind. Scripture can be found through out the book but it's not shoved down your throat (in case you are not into that kind of thing). It's used quite eloquently at just the right places in the book that compliment the author's research, writings, and thoughts. The Grief Stages are covered in depth, "What is Death?", "Fear of Death", "Suicide", "Anger",and "Fear" are examples of explored topics, "Trauma and the Neurological and Psychological Effects" are examined, and even Recovery Goals are listed to help the Grieving move toward a path to recovery. I was personally touched by the author's suggestion of how to counsel children through the death of a parent. He even includes a sample dialogue of the exact words to use in conversation with the affected child and how to prepare for their emotional responses. An excellent book on critical incidence all around. I wish everyone could read this!

This was another book on my Doctoral reading list it gave me tremendous progress in building by counseling skills and it gave me a sense of duty to the profession..I have placed this book in my personal library of must read again ! Dr.Brendell Thomas Francis

This book is written for Christian counselors who are faced with helping people in crisis. The author shares stories from his own counseling office that helps the novice understand how unpredictable crisis work can be and the importance of quick thinking. The information on grief was very helpful. The book offers a wonderful diagram on the jumbled emotions of a personal experiencing grief.

This book is not biblical. I do not recommend it for counseling.

I have previously sent reviews on this. An excellent review.

The content is excellent. This book is good for anyone in ministry or in life in general. I would recommend this book for anyone that would like to grow in Christian counseling.
