Synopsis

Penelope Prescott, 16, longs for excitement. She meets Kelvin Sutton, 17, an adventurer at heart, with a strong Christian faith, and they become fast friends. So, when they, along with a couple of cute boys, find an abandoned manor in the woods, it seems like the perfect place to party. But they soon discover that someone else is using the mansion for sinister purposes when they uncover a chemical spill, and a probable murder, both of which plunge them into peril unlike any danger they've ever known.

Customer Reviews

This novel captured my attention from the beginning and kept it all the way through. The message of a redeeming God came through. We all wrestle with experiences in our lives that leave us wondering "why" and "where are you God?" But in this story we read about a God who brings good out of seemingly despairing situations and who is very present in our darkest hours. There are a few good twists along the way to keep one in suspense.

Relatable characters that unfold much like getting to know someone in real life. Suspenseful - I'd like to see this as a movie.

This contemporary YA novel grabs the reader from the first page. The imaginative story and unexpected plot twists will surprise you.

This novel has all the elements to keep the reader interested; suspense, mystery, real-life drama, romance and humor. The likeable main character struggles with peer and family issues, and gets involved in situations way over her head but is able to find her way in the end through faith and love.

Great novel. Loved the book. Would buy more from this author.
