Synopsis

An orphaned Chinese boy living in ancient times, Tai has always been a loner and a mystery to the other people living in his village. When he encounters another "loner" who has learned the way of loving kindness, all that he has known, felt, and believed begins to change. In this intriguing tale from Cheryl Henry Hodgetts, a Tao spiritual master helps Tai learn that his so-called "detachment" can be a great blessing when properly aligned with the essential values of his heart. When it does, Tai’s mantra, "I don’t care" becomes "Let me help." `Kristine M Smith, Author and Copywriter~

The plant described in this story is purely fictional. Its description bears a resemblance to the thriving tetrapanax papyrifera plant brought over from China centuries ago and now grows prolifically in the southwestern and central United States. The papyrifera plant, often referred to as a rice paper plant, was used to make paper in ancient times. I created this fictional ancestor of the papyrifera for telling this story, but there could have been a plant like this sasyrifera plant. We may never really know, but my rule of thumb has always been: If you think it might have been, it most certainly could have been. Let the mystery begin!
