For over four decades, David Down has been fascinated by the history buried for centuries, waiting to be discovered. As a field archaeologist who excavates regularly in Israel, working with the Israel Antiquities Authority, he has been involved in excavations at different sites and is editor/publisher of the journal Diggings and the magazine Archaeological Diggings. He leads annual tour groups to the Middle East, and is known for his enthusiasm and depth of knowledge for the history and relevance of these important archaeological sites.

This book is great! Makes learning fun and easy with levels of study by color coding facts on the page...do I want all our material to be like this? Of course not, but it was a fun change, and made it easy to use for teaching my kids of different ages together. (For homeschoolers-we used it with MFW & HOD curriculums). We are not done yet, so I say 4 stars.

Great gift

Nice

This book is packed full of knowledge and great photography. It is very educational. The book is written in a way that really draws the reader's interest and points out a lot of interesting historical connections. Since reading this, we have purchased the whole Wonders of Creation series.

I can only remember this kind of material if I have charts of time periods, maps to show where that country is located. modern names for ancient cities. This book is a high school text book and I guess that's what I needed to understand the books I already have.

I purchased this for my 8 year old who keeps telling everyone that he is going to be an Archaeologist. It is a very interesting book and easy enough for a child to read and understand.

A wonderful book for an adult. True, much of it is geared towards a younger age, but it is full of useful information and can be enjoyed by many ages.

Awesome book, biblical perspective. Great for homeschool
