Customer Reviews

The lives and works of 80 of "the best-known, highest-praised, scariest, funniest, and most-promising authors of tales of future worlds, alternative universes, psychological spine-tinglers, and more" are covered in this two-volume set. These writers of interest to young adults extend from Mary Shelley and Robert Louis Stevenson to Stephen King and Anne Rice. YA authors such as Natalie Babbitt and Laurence Yep are also covered.Each author is detailed in an entry written in an inviting manner for a middle-school audience. Vital information and a black-and-white portrait begin each article. A 1,500-word biographical essay follows that gives specifics on early life, education, career, and the unique characteristics of the genre writer. Brief quotes from the authors or their critics are disbursed throughout the entries. Sidebars include short annotated lists of some of the authors' best works, photos of either a book jacket or movie still, and information about movie adaptations. Suggested sources for further reading are found at the end of each entry. Lists of Hugo and Nebula award winners and an author-title-subject index conclude each volume.Most of the writers covered in Science Fiction, Fantasy, and Horror Writers are also found in Something about the Author, but this new title will be convenient for children's services in school and public libraries. It is recommended as a stimulating reference, reading-advisory, and browsing tool for students and librarians.
