Customer Reviews

’’When Mary Poppins is about, her young charges can never tell where the real world merges into make-believe. Neither can the reader, and that is one of the hallmarks of good fantasy.’’ --New York Times, praise for the series

P. L. TRAVERS (1899-1996) was a drama critic, travel essayist, reviewer, lecturer, and author of the ’Mary Poppins’ books. She wrote several other books for adults and children, but it is for the character of Mary Poppins that she is best remembered.

I really enjoyed hearing the voice of the lady who originally wrote the Mary Poppins books! Hopefully you will too!

Magical adventures that delight, engage and trigger everyone's imagination! Childhood as it would be in a perfect world! Unforgettable enjoyment!

Great book

There's no reason to buy this book except to complete your Mary Poppins collection. Instead of wasting your time on this book, you should simply reread the first book in the series, the incomparable Mary Poppins. P. L. Travers should have stopped while she was ahead.

If you are not a fan of Mary Poppins you are unlikely to enjoy this book. Set in London, it is Midsummer's Eve, the most magical night of the year. Nothing is the same and the poor Park Keeper is worried about who is breaking the bye-laws. Of course Mary Poppins is present with Michael, Jane with the babies in the perambulator. Bear is hungry so Mrs. Corry tears off one of her fingers. Imagine Bear's surprise when he discovers it is barley sugar! What is Mr. Banks all excited about? How about Orion? Will the Park Keeper really find true love by walking backwards after having rubbed cucumber behind his ears? Many, many more characters are involved in this definitely nonsensical story at times and in fact as we read it aloud, I am sure some of it went over the children's heads. HOWEVER it was a fun read but would wait for your children to be at least 8+ before reading it.

The adventures led by Mary Poppins are always warm and bright without a speck of evil or darkness, and make me smile. With her, the most far-away things such as the sky, cloud, moon, and stars are drawn nearer, just in front of me, and all turned into some warm and friendly ones. In this book, Mary Poppins introduces me to some lonly Stars who love herbs in a Midsummer's Eve and then to the Man-in-the-Moon who always awake and watch on things, surrounded by stacks of deserted but still lovely stuffs. After the trips with her, you(as well as I) may find yourselves(I really do!) seeing the herb pots and thinking the Stars, or drinking a cup of hot coccoa and being sorry for the Man-in-the-Moon who can't indulge himself with even a cup of soothing drink that will make him sleepy. Mary Poppins is the One and Only who can make us like this !
