Jennifer Posh loves Milwaukee so much that she's made promoting it her full time job. She works as lead copywriter at VISIT Milwaukee by day, and by night she's a blogger, freelancer and avid supporter of the city's theater (and dining!) scene. After growing up in the greater Milwaukee area, she strayed just as far as the state line to study creative writing at Beloit College. She then returned to her favorite city and currently lives in Milwaukee's Bay View neighborhood.

I saw the segment on Channel 6 about this book and had to get it. My experience with self- and co-published books, is that they're marginal in quality, editing, and content. Not the case here. Ms. Posh did a great job of capturing all there is to do in Milwaukee and did it with a great writing style, and no editing blunders. Many of the things listed, I've done, but I've found many new places and things to check out. Many interesting facts are presented too, such as: the Milwaukee Wave is the oldest continually operating professional soccer franchise in North America! Who knew?? She provides suggested itineraries for various scenarios too. All-in-all, a great book, whether you've lived here all your life, or are just passing through for a few days.

It has a lot of predictable interesting things to do in it, but falls short. There are so many places missing. I liked the "Milwaukee Bucket List" book better.
