Synopsis

i>clicker provides user-friendly technology that enables instructors and students to interact dynamically through question-and-answer polling, and accurately records results to improve learning outcomes. The i>clicker Student Response System (or SRS) is comprised of intuitive software and simple remotes with a primary purpose of increasing interaction in large and small classroom settings. By engaging students, i>clicker helps confirm comprehension, provides the ability to address misconceptions in real-time, and offers formative and summative assessment opportunities. Built by educators, i>clicker seamlessly integrates with all major Learning Management Systems (LMS) and provides comprehensive pedagogical resources so the technology can be used in meaningful ways. REEF Polling is a mobile-optimized engagement system developed by i>clicker. Built from the ground up, REEF Polling is focused on providing a superior mobile experience, and like i>clicker, is easy to set up and use. Instructors present with anything, send images and questions to student devices, and can sync or import data into their LMS. Students respond to questions with any device, receive correct and incorrect answers, and can review session history as a study guide outside of class. REEF Polling is a hybrid product, allowing students in the same classroom to use their smartphone, tablet, laptop or i>clicker remote.

Bought for school and does what it says. Easy to register and use.

My iclicker had a difficult time connecting to my professor’s database. I ended up just using the 6 month trial for class and it was so much more reliable. I could of just spent the $10 for the app instead of the steep price I paid for this device.

Very overpriced!! I need it for school, so I have no choice, but to purchase it.

Works well for classes that require the physical device (app use is not allowed). The screen is nice to ensure that my response was recorded in a large auditorium classroom with hundreds of students. Kind of costly, but required and works as advertised!

I had to use an iclicker for one of my lectures. I thought it was pretty cool and an easy way to take a quiz in a large lecture hall. Mine worked with minimal problems, however, many people had issues with it in class, sometimes the responses were not pick up, and then the class was held up because of the iclickers. There's not much benefit to getting the newer version if the answers as all multiple choice and you don't need a screen. Overall, my device worked with no problems and if you have to get one, is a much better option than the school book store.

Brand new, fast shipping and it works great! Somewhat expensive compared to other websites but the other ones were sold out. I am overall satisfied with the product.

My son used it all last semester and it still works which is very impressive. My son is not careful with anything.

I purchased this because it was required by my class. It is sturdily constructed, with comfortable buttons and a good sized design. It is way overpriced, but that was expected.3 stars because it is horridly overpriced, and only mildly useful - can't we move past such dated technology, or at least, stop paying so much for a product that hasn't changed in over a decade?
