I bought this for a motorcycle trip to the Black Hills. No GPS on my bike so I got a map for every state I had to pass through. It did it’s job and helped me get there and back.One additional comment: Call me old school but I love a good map. My car GPS makes me dumber every time I use it. I find myself blindly following it’s directions only to find that I could have saved time and gas by planing the route myself. I also seem to remember the directions better when I plot it out on an "old-fashioned" map.

I like paper maps - I'm one of those people who goes off on random trips, but well researched. My preferred method of traveling an area is to read a book on it, mark up a map with a highlighter, and set off, sort sticking to the highlighted route, but not necessarily. This is a great map for that, although the split in the front and back sides of the map went right through a part of the state I would have preferred to have on the same side. Ah well, I suppose no one consulted me on the shape of the state, and they had to split the map somewhere.

Bought this for our bug-out go bag. Solid map with expansions of Manhattan, NYC, Central Long Island, Buffalo/Niagra, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Albany, Ithaca, Elmira, Binghamton. Also has a good index. It's designed to be readable at the expense of a bit of detail (significant blank spaces in more rural areas, no relief), but it's a reasonable tradeoff. I would not look forward to trying to navigate with it, and am old enough to have done so pre-iPhones, but it's better than nothing.

We take a two week road trip each year and like to follow as many scenic routes as possible. The Rand McNally we have found to be perfect for this. We will make up 3 or four states at a time and find that these maps clearly identify possible routes.

Great map for when we go on vacation. I don't like GPS and was brought up on using a map so this will really help while on vacation.

It showed us everything that we needed to know about western New York. The streets were accurate and there is just something about being able to see more of your planned route than can be shown on a 5" screen that is helpful when traveling in an unknown area.

Always have the detail that I'm looking for.
