Gr. 2-5, younger for reading aloud. Puns, parodies, slapstick, doggerel, tongue-twisters, and all kinds of nonsense rhymes abound in this large collection of comic verse by favorite children's poets such as Prelutsky, Hoberman, Viorst, Ciardi, and many others. There are lots of poems about eating (including burps and greasy, grimy guts), and about school, family, and bedtime. Everything's physical, from stinky feet to creepy crawlers. The wordplay is funny ("Pick up your room"), and the black-and-white cartoon illustrations express the ridiculous situations and wild exaggeration that will make kids laugh about their world. Really cute and witty poems, my 2nd grader enjoys it but some poems are still a little over her head.

Great for helping kids practice outloud reading and cadence!

One of the books of poetry that I enjoy with my grandkids just before they head to bed when we have a sleep-over.

This is a cute book for your children to read but it dose purposely have in proper grammar and miss spelled words to make the poems funny.

My seven-year-old grandson loves it, Read it out loud to several at breakfast and to me and grandpa many times. This series are his favorite books!

This book is a book of poems that come from different authors. I would recommend this book for a book report.Kids will enjoy it! I doubt that they will bore you.This book only has 106 pages so you would giggle about 106 times.People would like the book because these authors have wonderful and exciting creativity and poems.I personally like the book because it has funny things that I am into.

I've read this with my second graders for the past two years, and they LOVE it! It has a great variety of silly poems from a lot of different authors. There are short poems and longer ones, but the long poems are not too long that the kids lose interest and skip over them. Our two favorite poems are I Thought a Thought and Row, Row, Row Your Boat. It's so much fun to watch the kids share their favorite poems with each other and be practically bent over laughing! :-)
