Yes, it’s big (you can fold it). And yes, you have to carry it around (you can fold it). It’s a really great old-school map that got my friend and me all around Brittany with NO problems over a week’s driving vacation. We had taken the train from Paris to Rennes, basically made a clockwise circle toward the coast, along the west side, across the north to Dinan, and ended up at Mont St Michel. From there we depended on other maps to get to Paris for our return flight (since this map only covers Brittany), and that’s the only part of the trip where we ran into trouble. Michelin maps are simply the BEST! Don’t leave home without one!

This map was recommended to us by our daughter who knows Brittany well for our first visit to this region. It appears clear, with plenty of detail and although the size of the printing of town names does appear rather small in the rural areas, the overall effect is very clear. We shall be able to comment more on its usefulness once we have actually used it in Brittany but I would recommend it at this point.

If you are going to be traveling in the region, this is the scale you'll need to get around. Most other maps available are too large a scale and therefore don't even show the bulk of the smaller roads that you'll need if your going to look for wineries, farmer markets and special events such as D-Day anniversary expeditions.

This a great map-covers the region as you would expect and provides the detailed needed to plan our route. What more can you ask for. I plan to use this in conjunction with my GPS to find our way around on the highways and city road in France.

Very detailed and helpful

Excellent map of Brittany, which we used for our self-guided tour. No need for a GPS with this map.

It is a very detailed and wonderful map, but it is HUGE, way too big to unfold in a car, and impossible to turn over easily. I suppose the comment is that it is too good for what we needed it for.

And Michelin does them the best. It's huge & fills both sides. Having said that it doesn't have any close ups of cities that are on the map. That would make it great.
