Customer Reviews

Everybody needs somebody sometime! Abby and Cheerio found those somebodys in the Pacific Northwest. I agree that anyone that said dogs didnÃƒÂ¢Ã â ¬Ã â„¢t understand English had never said bacon around one ÃƒÂ¢Ã â ¬Ã â œ or treat, or walk in the park, orÃƒÂ¢Ã â ¬Ã Â¦ Anyway, if Cheerio doesnÃƒÂ¢Ã â ¬Ã â„¢t like someone, neither do I!!! Cheerio doesnÃƒÂ¢Ã â ¬Ã â„¢t like Craig Malcolm. It seems as if no one likes him, so we fit right in! Anyone who doesnÃƒÂ¢Ã â ¬Ã â„¢t tip probably should have been eaten by tigers when they were young (both our daughter and I have worked as waitresses in the past). In spite of that lizard, I enjoyed the book and recommend it.

The mystery was not overly complicated, but I think that they will get more so with time. I live in the pacific northwest also and really enjoyed the setting. It took me just a bit to get attached to the main character, but then I really enjoyed reading about all the characters. Not a heavy read, no graphic violence. I really enjoyed the book and have the next one listed. Perfect for what I needed.

A wonderful new series that takes place in the Northwest. Her husband dies overseas and she goes to live with her husband's grandmother. Her first friend she makes gets accused of murder. Throw in a cute park ranger and you have a fun little mystery. Well worth reading.

I had an opportunity to read this book and I want you to know that I am now a solid fan of Angela C Blackmoore. We have already preordered the next book in this series 'Cold Murder & Dark Secrets'. Nicely paced and characters that will deserve and receive more attention from us in the future. This is particularly interesting because the MC is the widow of a service member and faces extra challenges. Just the right read for a night at home.

For those who know or enjoy the Pacific Northwest, the setting of this mystery is a nice backdrop for new friendship, strong emotions and murder. Throw in a little humor and a hint of romance, and it becomes an easy read. My criticism is the poor editing. Far too many errors that should have been caught before release. If just a couple, I would have said typos, but they are too multiple.

Beginning of a good series, set in an idyllic small town in Oregon. Charming without being twee. I liked all the characters. Abby is a good person to hang out with, her dog Cheerio is very doggy, grandmother and Mr Wilberforce, love interest Gabe, and friend Becky are real and nice . The pace of the mystery just right. I was amused by the alternative expletives: Jackrabbits! Cheese biscuits! I've read the next two books already.Agree about the typos/ grammar though. It wasn't bad enough to be more than mildly distracting, but all the erroneous apostrophe-s usage should have been edited out. Hopefully the series will be successful enough that the author can hire a copy-editor - that's all it would take.

The first book in the Red Pine Falls series made me an instant Angela Blackmoore fan. Abby Morgan is at loose ends following the death of her soldier husband in Afghanistan. Moving to Red Pine Falls to live with her husband's (and now hers) grandmother, Abby is starting to open up and live life to the fullest again. She makes her first new friend in her new town, only to be faced with yet another tragedy when her new BFF Becky is accused of murdering a local land developer that Becky had a public kerfuffle with, The characters are believable, the plot is well developed, and I enjoyed the book so much I bought the entire series. #4 is due out at the end of the month and I can hardly wait!

I'd just made myself finish a so-so book, hoping it would get better, so I was really happy to choose this book next. I was drawn in from the beginning & loved the small town, the atmosphere, the people...& Cheerio ! I read straight through & will continue with this author . Anyone looking for an interesting , well-written read will enjoy this book. Maybe you'll be lucky like I was & have a rainy day to read & relax in!
