Synopsis

Designed for use in middle school introductory technology education courses, Technology: Engineering Our World contains a strong emphasis on science, technology, engineering, and math integration. It also helps student understand design processes and how to communicate their designs. In addition, Technology: Engineering Our World covers the impacts of technology on the environment and highlight things students can do to make a difference. Textbook covers all middle school objectives from the Standards for Technological Literacy. Reading Target activities help students focus on the material in each chapter. Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math Application features provide activities to strengthen student skill in these areas. Think Green features help students make environmentally friendly decisions. Review questions, critical thinking questions, activities, and STEM applications are included at the end of each chapter.The Teacher's Edition places a variety of instructional elements in the margins of this text to help reinforce, extend, and review chapter content. Correlations to the Standards for Technological Literacy are also displayed.
