Beautiful, high quality pictures.

My four year old granddaughter loves her own calendar

This truly is a deluxe calendar. In fact, it's so oversized that I'm sure it won't fit in the usual spot for which I bought it, so...that may be a bit of an issue. But worth dealing with, because wow! Does that linen paper feel nice. Because the designs are so large, the day boxes are considerably smaller than on an average calendar--however, based on experience, I think they ought to be sufficient for the person who'll mainly be writing on it. I love flat it'll hang due to the spiral binding, with a nice gold hook/handle in the center instead of the typical hole.The artwork is super-classy. Each princess gets her own month and beautiful, well-suited natural backdrop. The designer(s) did a pretty fine job of month-matching, though I might swap a few. No matter. The pics are stunning. My favorites are Ariel, looking exquisite in a seafoam gown on a purple-tinted beach for my birthmonth...and the magnificent Merida positively owning her breathtaking green vista in the fall. (Her hair, reminiscent of autumn leaves, makes her an appropriate choice for October. And because I share the hair, I'm being her this Halloween! Did Elsa last time. ;)Only complaint? The absence of Elsa & Anna. At some point, Frozen needs to stop being kept separate from the rest of the princess titles. The whole club should be together. What happened here is that December was given to the trio of Belle, Mulan, & Cinderella--a seemingly random trio, 'til you consider that Cinderella's fairy tale was retold in live-action last year, and Mulan's & Belle's stories are soon to receive the same treatment. Of course, Jasmine's and Ariel's are also planned, probably followed by the rest...;p But, anyway.The calendar comes in a protective envelope which matches its front & rear images.
